THE GREAT NEED OF CLEAR WATER AND HOW IT MAY BE OBTAINED

Some Valuable Suggestions Pointing Out the Methods By Which Richmond Could Enjoy Good Drinking Water Instead of the Ugly Fluid Now Used.

Billion of The Times:

Sir.—The citizens of Richmond are interested in getting good drinking water and we think they ought to know what steps lead to be very dangerous. This has many times been proven to be an erroneous theory. Settling basins are only artificial lakes, and lakes are agreed by all ested in getting good drinking water and we think they ought to know what steps have been taken in this direction. Superintendent Bolling has for many years been pegging away at the subject of clear water for Eichmend, and it seems that there is now some prospect of his efforts being rewarded, to the great benefit of the city. It does not need a scientist to see that our water does not come up to the stantiard of pure and wholesome, for health experts lay it down that such a water must be colorless, transparent, with no odor or sediment, and pleasant to the taste. From the bacteriological standpoint Richmond water is unusually satis-factory. Much is still unknown about the causation of disease, but it is known posicausation of disease, but it is known posi-tively that typhold fever and choiera are generally produced by bacteria introduced into the system by water. There is a strong probability that malaria, yellow fever and diphtheria are introduced in the same manner. It is positive that many forms of diarrhoea, dysentery and other intestinal disturbances are due 10. other intestinal disturbances are due to decomposing vegetable or animal matter, which may be introduced through water. Of the bacterial diseases we need only Of the bacterial diseases we need only concern ourselves about typhoid fever, for the obvious reason that Asiatic cholera is rare with us, and that measures which would eliminate typhoid fever would also eliminate any other bacteria. The ordinary citizen who sees scientific statements about the enormous number of bacteria contained he a manife contained he as a batte constilled. contained in a minute quantity of water contained in a minute quantity of water is apt to be alarmed and think "who then can be saved?" But he must remember that the vast majority, and possibly all of these, are hurmless; that while bacteria are present everywhere in immense numbers, only a few eccentric species have the faculty of producing disease in the human below. human being THE MAIN FAULT.

The main fault with Rehmond's water is that it is not clear and transparent, and at times, on standing, does acquire a distinct odor, indicative of decomposing animal or yegetable matter. We believe that as a cause of disease our water compares favorably with the water supply of most of the large cities in the United States, but this is no good reason for not making it satisfactory in other respects. If our water is made clear whatever disease-bearing properties it may have will be eliminated, and, moreover, it would De a satisfaction even to those who do not mind drinking this unprepossessing mixture to know that when we washed our bodies and household appliances they would be clean.

How can James River water be made clear? The report presented to the committee of the City Council last winter by Dr. J. W. Mallet, Professor of Chemistry of the University of Virginia; Dr. E. C. Levy, Professor of Bacteriology of the Medical College of Virginia, and Superintendent Charles E. Bolling, considered the practical billy and efficiency of the various me almost, but not quite clear, and that

The bill for this week is a good one. It is the Clarenze Quintette. Fred Clarenze has put together such acts as the Young

American Quintette and the Bootblack

Quintette, and the five youngsters he is now presenting at the best vaudeville houses are declared to be better than his past efforts. The quintette will render selections of new popular songs, execute clever dancing and introduce comedy ideas that are new. Miss Maude Mere-with is one of the handsomest women on the stage. She is as clever as she is pretty, and her rise in the profession is a re-ward of merit. A great critic in a very complimentary notice of the young vocal-ist, declared that she was a "singer who can sing," and the line has since been

Smith, Dotey and Coc, the musical art-comedians—Davenport is reducers—are also on the bill. There is good singing, good mude, new comedy, new dancing and movelty, all making a real vaudeville bill, and one that will doubtless be a great grawing card for the summer theatre.

artificial lakes, and lakes are agreed by all scientists to be the ideal water supply for large communities. Dr. Levy's experiments, made at the same time and with the same water as were Dr. Mallet's, show that the number of bacteria was reduced in twenty days from 195 per cubic centimetre.

THE FILE AND ANDER PROCESS

THE FILTRATION PROCESS. Filtration is the separation of suspended matter with or without the use of chemical coagulant. Experimentation with the latter, i. e., a filter constructed of crushed granite, gravel, coarse and fine sand, in all six feet ten inches thick, did not render the water perfectly clear, but reduced suspended solids from 115 parts to 12 parts per million. The primary object of treating our water, namely, that of rendering it clear, water, namely, that of rendering it clear, was not obtained, and moreover the filtration process was so slow and irregular that the result was considered far from satisfactory. This is due to the very small size of the suspended particles of solid matter passing through such a filter. The efficiency of such a filter in removing bacteria was decidedly below what is considered requisite for a good filter. The American system which is known as chemical ered requisite for a good filter. The American system, which is known as chemical filtration, is the method by which salts of alum or iron are added to the water. This combines with lime and magnesium compounds which exist in the water, forming a gelatinous mass. This mass gathers up the solid particles, no matter how minute they are, and makes them readily separable by a filter. Experiment with such a filter reduced the suspended solids from 129 parts to 4 parts per million. The water was changed from "very muddy" to "brilliantly clear," and 99 89-100 percent of all bacteria were removed. The cent of all bacteria were removed. The cost of running such a filtration plant is in proportion to the degree of muddiness of the water, as the amount of coagulant is less for clearer water.

THE SETTLING PROCESS.

THE SETTLING PROCESS.

Here is shown the great advantage of the preliminary treatment of the water by the settling process. During 1899, James River water was clear eighty-five days, slightly turbid fifty days, turbid one hundred and sixty-eight days, and very muddy sixty-two days. What has been said above with regard to the effect of sedimentation will immeliately show how much is accomplished by this process. The "very muddy" water applied to the mechanical filter took up twenty-eight grains of alumina sulphate per gallon. With sedimentation very muddy water would never be applied, and though a large portion of the year it would not be necessary tion of the year it would not be necessary to filter at all.

Dr. Mallet said, "I have no hestitation in recommending that whatever further action may be decided upon afterwards, the first step taken should be the construction of a large storage reservoir, in which the river water may be allowed to clear itself as far as possible by natural sedimentation. Chemically the water would be improved during storage by the gradual practicability and efficiency of the various schemes. These are sedimentation and filtration. By sedimentation is meant the storing of the water in large setting basins and allowing the suspended matter to go the bottom. Dr. Mallet's experiments with such procedure show that water which was decidedly turbid, and of a strong, yelfows brown color, in twenty days had become almost but not onlike clear, and that of any successful and reasonably economical system of treatment, whether by a sedimentation resevoir is beyond doubt the essential prorequisite to the adoption of any successful and reasonably econo-mical system of treatment, whether by the suspended solids were reduced to less than one-third of what they were at the beginning. It has been objected that water standing in storage basins for many days will become so infected with disease bear-uses many beautiful electric effects, and her act will be a favorite one.
